Dear Jody

s22(1)

I know the seminar comes at a very difficult time, following on from the shocking loss of the Voice Referendum. I am deeply disappointed, s22(1)

- The referendum changed the nation. While it did not pass, it is important to acknowledge that over five million people voted in favour of a voice for First Nations people.

Dear Jody,

I am, like so many Australians, so disappointed with the defeat of the referendum.

It came as no surprise as you would know that all Australians feel that they have no voice to parliament.

The referendum was large on symbolism but, as Mr.Dutton would argue, short on how it may have actually improved the lives on our first nation.

Good morning and firstly I wish to state I am not proud of the result of the referendum. It was yet another display of the deep rooted racism in this country.
